

FOP Lodge NY 3100 Newsletter "The Call Box" September 2025

We Will Never Forget

On September 11, 2001, the world watched as two jetliners slammed into New York City's World Trade Center while another crashed into the Pentagon in Arlington, Virginia. Passengers onboard a fourth airplane averted even more destruction by trying to regain control of their airplane, which was intended to hit either the White House or U.S. Capitol. As a result, the hijackers crashed it in a field outside of Shanksville, Pennsylvania.

September is here already!!!!

I hope everyone enjoyed the summer season and was able to get out of the heat a little.

We had our ROMEO luncheon in August. We had about 30 members in attendance and it was nice seeing everyone.

September we will hit the ground running. September 11th we were invited again to Wellington's memorial service. We do have a member willing to speak so please try to attend. There are normally a few rows reserved for us so please get there early.

September's monthly meeting will be on the 18th in Boynton Beach.

Our golf outing is on October 10th. We are filling up with foursomes but there is always room for one more. Anyone that wants to play, please reach out to Paul Read.

...remember to keep checking your emails for other updates and events.....

Young Dad Was Getting Ready to Leap from Golden Gate Bridge — Then the 'Miracle' of a Stranger's Voice Stopped Him

JOHNNY DODD

Sun, August 24, 2025, 5:25 PM EDT

NEED TO KNOW

- Retired California Highway Patrol Sgt. Kevin Briggs first met Kevin Berthia in March 2005 when Berthia was moments away from jumping off the Golden Gate Bridge
- Briggs was responsible for talking more than 200 people out of leaping from the famed California landmark
- After helping Berthia, they later forged a deep friendship and now travel the country speaking about mental health and their work preventing suicide

On the worst morning of his life, Kevin Berthia awoke and, after years of fighting with depression, decided that he was going to drive to the Golden Gate Bridge and jump.

Berthia, who was 22 years old at the time and living in Oakland, Calif., had never been to the famed landmark before and had to repeatedly ask for directions along the way.

But minutes after parking in a lot at the north end of the bridge on March 11, 2005, he left his keys in the ignition and took off walking along the 1.7-mile expanse, glancing down at the San Francisco Bay, telling himself, “The water is my freedom. I’m ready.”

Before long, the young man who had just lost his job and was overwhelmed by medical bills after the recent premature birth of his daughter scrambled over the railing and soon found himself balancing on a tiny metal conduit that ran along the outside of the bridge.

The frigid water of the bay churned 220 feet below him.

“I started my countdown,” Berthia recalls now. “And I braced myself for impact.”

Then something unexpected happened. Two decades later, Berthia still refers to it as “a miracle.”

California Highway Patrol Sgt. Kevin Briggs — whose duties included keeping watch on the bridge — happened to be passing by when he spotted Berthia on the other side of the railing, lost in thought as he clutched the metal structure.

During his career, Briggs managed to prevent more than 200 people just like Berthia from leaping to their deaths

“Hi,” Briggs remembers telling Berthia, who was staring intently down into the water. “Is it okay if I come over and speak with you for a while? I’m not going to touch you. I’m just here to talk with you and to listen.”

Over the course of the next 92 minutes, Briggs got Berthia to open up about why he wanted to end his life.

“I never try to tell anyone what to do,” Briggs says. “I just listen with empathy and understanding, let them speak their peace, then get them to think about coming back over the rail.” It worked.

Over the course of the next 92 minutes, Briggs got Berthia to open up about why he wanted to end his life.

“I never try to tell anyone what to do,” Briggs says. “I just listen with empathy and understanding, let them speak their peace, then get them to think about coming back over the rail.”

It worked.

Berthia admits that for the first time in his life, talking with Briggs, he shared his “deepest, darkest secrets” during their conversation. He pulled himself back over the railing and was soon taken to a local hospital where he spent the next 11 days.

After returning home, Berthia's mental health problems quickly returned. Seeing a photo of him on the side of the bridge published on the front page of the San Francisco Chronicle only made matters worse.

“For the next eight years,” he says, “I went back into one of the deepest, darkest depressions I’ve ever experienced.”

Never miss a story — sign up for PEOPLE's free daily newsletter to stay up-to-date on the best of what

Within moments of meeting him, Berthia realized none of that mattered.

“We’ve been friends ever since,” says the 62-year-old Briggs, a survivor of cancer and childhood sexual abuse. Berthia insists that their relationship is deeper than that.

“We’re more like brothers,” he says. “What happened that day had nothing to do with him being a White man and me being Black. It’s all about the power of connection, human connection.”

September, 2025

Their reunion proved life changing for Berthia, who gave an off-the-cuff speech while presenting Briggs with his award that floored the hundreds of people in attendance.

“I talked about everything that led me to the bridge that day,” he says. “For the first time in my life I was myself, the person that I’d always wanted to be. I was open and honest and vulnerable. And after I got done, the whole room stood up.”

The crowd’s reaction forced Berthia to realize for the first time in his life that he wasn’t alone in his struggles with suicide and, suddenly, he wanted to do whatever he could to try and change things.

In the years that followed, he not only found the tools he needed better handle his depression but he also created an eponymous foundation that is focused on removing the stigma from mental illness and treatment. A “Never in a million years did I think that my living in this dark place could help others,” says Berthia, now 42. He has given presentations to thousands of people, ranging from police academy graduates to elementary school pupils.

Numerous times a year he pairs up with Briggs — who has also become a polished, powerful speaker on the issue of suicide prevention — to share their gripping story.

Their hope is to empower others to do what Briggs did on that fateful day 20 years ago, when the two men first crossed paths on the Golden Gate Bridge. Suicide remains prevalent: More than 49,000 people killed themselves in 2023, according to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention.

“It really is all about just listening and not feeding these folks [in crisis] a bunch of crap, telling them they’re going to be fine,” Briggs says. “It’s about learning how to talk to someone who is suffering.”

The goal, both men say, is to help those in the midst of crisis to understand that they’re not alone.

Adds Berthia: “It’s not an easy topic to talk about, but as I always tell people, ‘Kevin makes you think, and I make you feel.’ ”

If you or someone you know is considering suicide, please contact the National Suicide Prevention Lifeline at 1-800-273-TALK (8255), text "STRENGTH" to the Crisis Text Line at 741-741 or go to suicidepreventionlifeline.org.
